BUILDING OUR FUTURE TOGETHER

Dear Friend of UMMA,

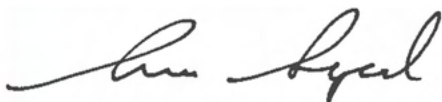

We are so grateful for all the support you have provided us over the last two decades. UMMA was first launched as a grassroots project by UCLA and Charles R. Drew Medical School students who volunteered their time in service of their community. Today, we are a federally qualified health center (FQHC) with two clinic locations in South Los Angeles, a 13-member board, and a staff of 65 full-time employees.

UMMA Community Clinic has its roots in community organizing as a Community Health Center. The Community Health Center Movement stands on the shoulders of the Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s and its leaders whose dreams ignited many kinds of social change. Civil rights leaders like Rosa Parks, U.S. Rep. John Lewis, Dorothy Height, Jo Ann Robinson, the friend we lost – U.S. Rep. Elijah Cummings, and Reverend Martin Luther King Jr. inspired others to stand for peace, equality, health, and unity. Like Dr. King, the budding leaders of the health center and farmworker movements stood at the crossroads of history and had dreams to bring about change in their community. Today, because of the bold leadership of doctors H. Jack Geiger and Count Gibson, John Hatch, activist Dolores Huerta, and many others, a strong movement that supports access to quality health care not only remains but thrives, serving 29 million people nationwide.

The journey of UMMA has been building on this legacy. Today, we stand as the largest and most comprehensive health institution founded by American Muslims. Our story is one of collaboration, across lines of faith, ethnicity, and partnerships between public and private institutions.

As we embark on this next chapter of growth, we ask you to join us in ensuring a finer future for our patients as we deepen our impact in South Central Los Angeles.

Thank you for your continued support.

Here at UMMA Clinic, we believe that healthcare starts at home. We have partnered with Food Forward and now host a free food fair at our Fremont Clinic location every 2nd and 4th Wednesday of each month. This is a great opportunity to bring our community together.

We source the best produce and our staff and volunteers organize all the fruits and vegetables just as if you would shop at a grocery store.

The produce is available to both patients and the community at large. We hope to continue expanding this project to reach even more community members.

We are also a local food distribution center for other non-profit organizations.

OUR BLACK VISIONS OF WELLNESS STAFF AND OUR PROGRAMS STAFF MEMBERS

At UMMA Clinic, we are going beyond medicine with our Black Visions of Wellness (BVOW) program. BVOW works with underserved African/African American communities to provide behavioral and primary health services that promote wellness and rally resources in the interest of health initiatives, cultural recognition, educational reinforcement, family-building, and community revitalization.

We work with our community partners to provide services such as yoga, healthy cooking classes, zumba, acupuncture, health education classes, gardening workshops, personal training, career development, and life skills training. We help our clients with job hunting and college admissions counseling.

VOLUNTEERS AT THE UPLIFT CHARITY EID FESTIVAL

Throughout the year, UMMA Clinic hosts and participates in health fairs.

Our teams of physicians and nurses provide free medical screenings, such as glucose and blood pressure testing. We also offer professional consultation at these health fairs.

UMMA Community Clinic's participation in health fairs provides an excellent opportunity for our network of volunteer medical practitioners to serve their local community.

CASSONDRA ANGU - PROGRAMS AND CLINICAL COORDINATOR

Cassie Angu started as one of UMMA's Americorps VISTAs (Volunteer in Service to America) in 2017, and for the last 2 years, she has been working full-time managing our Student Health Leaders Program at John C. Fremont High School.

Cassie is passionate about youth, community medicine, health education, and health equity in South Los Angeles.

The Student Health Leaders act as peer educators and student ambassadors to UMMA's Teen Clinic on their high school campus. Cassie educates them on pertinent health topics that affect their socio-economic demographic. Students put on campus tabling events, group therapy, present at youth conferences, lead community workshops and encourage their peers to utilize the services at the clinic.

UMMA Clinic has strong roots at UCLA. Many of our founders were UCLA Students in 1992, when they founded the clinic to address health inequities in South Central Los Angeles.

Since then, we have maintained a strong partnership with the UMMA Volunteer Project, that embodies the core values of community service that inspired our founders.

ZAIN KHALIFEH - UVP PROJECT DIRECTOR

The Assembly Select Committee on Ending the School to Prison Pipeline invited UMMA Clinic's CEO, Adel Syed, to provide testimony on the impact that UMMA's health programs have on the students and community.

UMMA Clinic hosted this event alongside Fremont High School. We continue to strengthen our partnerships with LAUSD and other local organizations striving to end the School to Prison Pipeline. We are grateful to Reginal Byron Jones-Sawyer Sr, Assemblymember of the Fifty-Ninth District, for hosting this hearing and submitting legislation to change the language designating students who are 'at-risk' to 'at-promise', a move that was widely celebrated at the hearing.

The school-to-prison pipeline is a disturbing national trend wherein children are funneled out of public schools and into the juvenile and criminal justice systems. Many of these children have learning disabilities or histories of poverty, abuse, or neglect, and would benefit from additional educational and counseling services. Instead, they are isolated, punished, and pushed out.

ADEL SYED, CEO OF UMMA CLINIC

UMMA Community Clinic is proud to be the medical partner of ILM Foundation for their Annual Humanitarian Day (HDAY).

HDAY takes place in Skid Row, where the homeless population ranges between 5,000 to 8,000 people.

UMMA staff and volunteers provide free medical care to patients at this event.

Nearly a third of South Los Angeles residents live at or below the Federal Poverty Line, which means less money for basic needs and commodities. Coupled with one of the highest death rates in the country, there is a great need for trauma-informed care. We are expanding our behavioral health services to work alongside our patients to improve their overall well-being.

We are excited to announce that we will be expanding our Florence Clinic with the addition of a behavioral health wing. This will provide a dedicated space for our case managers and therapists to provide counseling, substance use treatment, and chronic disease prevention and management classes.

We have purchased a 15,000 sq. ft. facility in South Los Angeles. We will demolish the current structure and build our largest clinic, complete with administrative offices, a large community center, and offer specialty and additional health care services.

In partnership with LAUSD, in 2019 we began construction of a new dental clinic at our Fremont High School location. We are excited to bring dental care to a community where 1 in 3 adults and 1 in 8 children have not been able to access dental care due to high costs.
